Glasscock Faculty Research Fellowship

Up to seven fellowships valued at $5,000 each will be given per academic year. These fellowships are designed to address a need for funding for research that could not be accomplished otherwise in order to complete a book project, major article or series of articles, or other research project that makes an impact in the field. Money could be used for any travel, conference, archival/fieldwork, or other normally reimbursable expenses. This fellowship does not include release time, cannot be used for salary or course buyouts, neither can it be held during a Faculty Development Leave. The funding should be used during the year in which it was awarded. Recipients of the fellowship are required to commit to participating in the Faculty Colloquium Series during the year in which they hold the fellowship, which will function as a working group for these works in progress. Approximately four Research Fellows will comprise the Faculty Colloquium Series each semester depending on research needs/logistics and will work with the two Internal Faculty Residential Fellows assigned during this same semester. Projects will be chosen on the basis of their intellectual rigor, scholarly creativity, and potential to make a significant impact in the candidate's career and field. Only tenure track and tenured faculty are eligible.

Provide a working title for your presentation to the Faculty Colloquium Series:

I agree to present the work completed during the fellowship during the following academic year at a Glasscock Center Morning Coffee.

Please describe your current research project and expected outcomes at the end of the fellowship period. In addition to the general topic, include the research methodology, sources, and the contribution the work makes to your field(s). Research from non-humanities disciplines that takes an interpretive or qualitative approach to questions of meaning in human experiences and endeavors are also welcome. Humanities inquiries are usually qualitative and address questions of meaning in the products of human culture and thinking. (Limit 500 words. Please include word count at the end of your description.)

Please indicate how the $5,000 bursary would advance your project to completion. Be specific (e.g., the benefit and relevance of travel to a specific conference, fieldwork or archival research in specific locations or archives, collaboration with other scholars at TAMU or another location, purchase of research materials or access to digital resources, or other normally reimbursable expenses). This fellowship does not include release time, cannot be used for course buyouts, neither can it be held during a Faculty Development leave. Please provide as detailed a description and/or budget as possible so that we can assess how the bursary will be used. This grant is not intended to solely fund graduate students. (A small portion of funds may be used to pay graduate students for transcription, translation, indexing, graphic skills and other similar activities, but the main focus should address faculty research. (Limit 300 words. Please include word count at the end of your description.))
