

Childhood in the Humanities

Interdisciplinary Symposium

Join the Glasscock Critical Childhood Studies Seminar
and the Department of English for a one-day symposium exploring childhood.

Saturday, March 1, 2014
9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.
LAAH 453

The symposium will feature guest speakers and Texas A&M contributors.
Registration is free, and participants and attendees will receive lunch.
For more information and to register, go to ccstamusymposium.wordpress.com

About the symposium

Humanities disciplines offer multiple ways to study and teach childhood and adolescence. Featuring scholars of literature (both for children and for adults), history, recreation, philosophy, and more, this symposium seeks to investigate the challenges and intellectual opportunities afforded by investigations of childhood and adolescence.

Sponsored by:

